

Welcome to the vineyard hut

Dear guests, the innkeeper and his small team would like to offer you a piece of Saxon hospitality.

The vineyard hut is the premises of the “Wilder Mann” gardening association. The restaurant takes its name from the former vineyard on whose slopes wine has been grown since the 15th century. The first winegrowers were monks from the Augustinian monastery in Dresden’s Neustadt. All the slopes of the “Old Trachenberg” had already been cultivated in the 17th century and the winery that still existed at the foot of the mountain had been serving its own wine since 1690.

The name and symbolic figure “Wilder Mann” appeared for the first time in a licensing license renewed in 1710. Fully bearded, with a club and wearing a vine leaf apron, he adorned the entrance to the winery. Today the allotment gardeners successfully grow wine, mostly for their own needs, and thus continue a beautiful Saxon tradition.

From the terrace of the vineyard hut you have an excellent view over the city and, when the weather is clear, you can see far into the mountains of the Osterzgebirge.

This gave our restaurant the popular name “Kleiner Luisenhof”.

We want your stay in the vineyard hut to be as pleasant as possible we’re happy to accept your orders for family celebrations and other occasions.

The team from the Weinbergbaude wishes you a bon appetite!
